

Australasian Radiation Protection Society Inc

The Australasian Radiation Protection Society Inc (ARPS) is a professional society of more than 250 members engaged in one or more aspects of radiation protection. Members are engaged in a variety of activities designed to ensure the safe use of both ionising and non-ionising radiation for a wide variety of applications, in medicine, pure and applied science, industry and mining.

The primary objective of the Society is to promote the principles and practices of radiation protection, seeking to:

- Establish and maintain professional standards of radiation protection practice
- Encourage co-operation among persons engaged in radiation protection activities
- Provide for and give support to scientific meetings on topics related to radiation protection
- Encourage publications in the field of radiation protection.

communication

ARPS publishes a quarterly journal, Radiation Protection in Australasia, and a quarterly Newsletter for its members. ARPS also has a website (www.arps.org.au).

conferences seminars

ARPS holds a Conference each year. The venue for the conference rotates between the states of Australia and New Zealand. Smaller technical seminars and meetings are held by State branches of ARPS. ARPS is also active in encouraging scientific understanding among students and the public in general, holding displays and competitions to enhance the understanding of radiation protection issues.

membership

Membership of ARPS is open to anyone with an interest in radiation protection. Why not join Australasia's peak radiation protection body and benefit from our collective knowledge? There are several classes of membership: Fellows, Members, Associates, Affiliates and Corporate Members. The Society may also award Honorary Fellowships and Life Memberships.
